

About

Cael's Angels Association was started by James & Brittany Sigmundik after the stillbirth of their son Cael Charles on June 12, 2014. Cael's passing made us very aware of the need for financial resources and supportive programs for bereaved families. Our programs are designed to ease the financial burden imposed by stillbirth; provide supportive programs and services for families and support stillbirth research. Cael's Angels Association is a 501(c)3 charitable organization. All donations are tax deductible to the fullest extent of the law.

Mission

Helping Honor Baby Angels. Cael's Angels Association is dedicated to raising awareness and support for bereaved families while helping with the unanticipated expenses of a stillbirth.

Programs We offer

Funeral Expenses – Qualifying families can request financial support for the costs associated with burial/funeral expenses as funds are available.

Autopsy Expenses – When insurance coverage does not include autopsy qualifying families can request financial support for the costs associated with the full evaluation of a stillbirth as funds are available. Understanding what happened is so important in the healing process for grieving families. Likewise, understanding what did not cause a baby's death is very important in planning future pregnancies.

Bereavement Support – Grief work is difficult and may require professional assistance. Qualifying families can request assistance with funds to allow them the mental health guidance they need in these difficult times as funds are available.

Stillbirth Research – Until we understand better what causes stillbirth we cannot fully protect unborn babies. Funding for ongoing research is an important part of our mission.

Stillbirth Facts

Stillbirth is the death of an infant in-utero at 20 or more completed gestational weeks.

More than 26,000 babies are stillborn in the United States each year - 71 per day - 1 every 20 minutes. We are not alone.

Worldwide there are over 4 million stillbirths each year.

One in 160 American pregnancies ends in stillbirth.

Almost 50 percent of these deaths occur at or near full term and often seem to be otherwise healthy babies.

The majority of stillbirths (85%) occur before delivery with 15% occurring during labor and delivery.

Some of the more common diagnosable causes for stillbirth are: placental abruption and other placental problems, birth defects and chromosomal abnormalities, uncontrolled diabetes, pre-eclampsia, cord accidents and infections.

It is estimated that nearly two-thirds of all stillbirth deaths remain unexplained. Researchers feel that this is more likely due to a failure to investigate the deaths, rather than a medical mystery.

Few parents are encouraged to obtain a stillbirth evaluation (autopsy, placental exam or other clinical testing) to determine the cause of death.

Mothers who suffer a stillbirth do not receive recognition in many states. There is no standard record keeping for babies who do not take a breath.
